He was once at a fair seen to give a remarkably handsome but wickedooking bandit or gypsy of sixteen £20, and when asked if that was not a piece of cruel kindness to the boy, replied coolly that "it would give him a taste for money, and that when it was spent he would probably deed, this was a favorite pleasure of his, this picking out some miserable wretch and making him rich for a few days. He often was heard to say deliberately as he thus gave away his money: "There, now, is a had seed which is sure to strike root." It may again be doubted if this be true, and it is but fair to say that his more thoughtful friends looked upon such speeches as mere pieces of pleasantry with which he tried to get rid of the artificial character of the benevolent and charitable, which he felt to be irksome and unsuitable to him. At Bonlogne he was made the hero of a somewhat sensational scene, which rather belongs to the Chatelet or Porte St. Martin Theatre. In a great storm some sailors were seen clinging to the shrouds of their shipwrecked vessel, and through the tempest his voice to save each life, now twenty-five thousand. $862 43 and, finally, when the number was reduced to two, one hundred thousand. At play he would only risk a few twenty-france pieces; and once, when he had gone beyond his usual amount, and lost a few thousand francs, he was so piqued that he declared he had been cheated. This compliment he paid to his own club. Neither do his hospitalities appear to have been of a large or substantial kind. There was a particular emphasis laid on his cigars, of which he was an admirable judge, and of which stores of the choicest brands were sent to him. With these he took as much pains as other men would with their wine. He treated them scientifically. He had vast west fifty-four feet nine inches to the place of beginning, containing about 25 5-160 acres.

But it to an article of diet for people in health, and who wish to remain in that harpy condition, that milk should be most apprecisted. For the midday lunch of those whose hearty meal comes at night, or for the supper of those who dine at poon, nothing is so good.

The great variety and excellent quality of prepared cereals give a wide choice of food to use with milk. Bread-with berries in their season or baked sweet apples boiled rice, crecked wheat, oatmeal, hulled corn. or bominy, taken with a generous bowl of pure cold milk, makes the best possible light meal in warm weather for children, and for all adults who have not some positive playeddigesting it. The men of the firmest bealth and longest life are the men of regular and simple habits, and milk is a standard arusic

> ----A TERRIBLE MINTARIL

The configration of the scaffolds lutended for fireworks for the celebration of the marriage of Louis XVI. is generally known. Amid the distracted multitude. pressing on every side, trampled under the horser feet, precipitated into the ditches of the Rue Royal and the Square, was a young man, with a girl with whom he was in love. She was beautiful; their attachment had lasted several years; pecuniary causes had delayed their union; but the ful-lowing year they were to be married. For a long time the lover protected his seirethed, keeping her behind him, covher strength and courage. But the tumult, be ories, the terror and peril, every mountail

"I am sinking," she said; "my strongth alls-I can go no further."

"There is yet a way," wried the lover, He feels that his advice has been followed, and the hope of saving her whom He resists the most violent especiation; with his arms firmly before his breast, be with difficulty forces his way through the county at length he clears it. Arrived at one of the extrenities of the place, having set down hir precious burden, faltering, exhausted, fatigued to death, but intoxicated with joy, he turns round. It was a different person! Another, more active, had taken advantage of his recommendation; his dear one was

A CONSPIRACY OF ONE. One of the oldest quibbles of the quibble fruitful law is that known to this day among lawyers as the " single conspirator." While Burke and Hare tiere manufacturing subjects for the Scotch medical achoris, a borrible hag entered the sleep of a surgeonspothscary in an Irish town and offered to sell him a subject. He was ready enough to buy one, but by no means prepared to Searn that the commodity in question was get alive in the person of a nine-year-old boy, her grandson, who was waiting for her

"bekase, ye see, if I didn't sell him to wanet he'd spile, it's so hot."

Determined that such an atrocity should be punished, the doctor told her to call next day, when he wasn't too busy to talk to her. He then had a policeman hidden under the counter. In his bearing the harridan explained her plan to slap a pitch plaster over har victings month, and enflocate him in a tab of water. The officer, when she had finished, pounced on and arrested her, and

She had killed no one, so she was not guilty of murder. It must, therefore, besey to kill, but a single person canpline; it takes at least two. In necessary to include the surgeon in it. But this would be manifestly unfair, and after a keen argument by a shrewd young lawyer, who took the case up out of sheer deviltry, the arone was actually discharged, and probably went in search of a new customer for
